THE NEED

Children need a place to practice leadership.

Kids are asked to handle change, pressure, frustration, and responsibility before they have had enough chances to practice leading themselves through it. Advice alone is not enough. They need a standard, a system, and a place to run the same play when the hard moment

THE PRINCIPLE

Leadership is learned by doing.

Built to Lead uses martial arts as the practice field. Children meet clear standards, receive direct coaching, try again after mistakes, and finish with visible proof that they can do hard things.

WHAT CHANGES

RESPECT

Clear lines and the practice of meeting them.

IDENTITY

A child begins to see: "I am a leader."

FOLLOW-THROUGH

A repeatable plan for finishing what matters.

Every cohort is hosted with a community partner that helps identify the children who will benefit most. Family Martial Arts Academy provides the curriculum, instruction, equipment, parent reinforcement tools, and graduation experience.

WHAT ONE $197 SEAT COVERS

More than class. A complete leadership win.

1 Six weekly classes

45-60 minutes of martial arts and leadership instruction.

2 T-shirt and white belt

The child receives a program T-shirt and white belt to mark the start of the journey.

3 Leadership curriculum

Confidence, respect, focus, resilience, responsibility, and follow-through.

4 Parent Mission Briefs

Simple weekly language that helps families reinforce the lesson at home.

5 Board-breaking experience

A visible moment of courage, preparation, and decisive action.

6 Graduation and promotion

White-belt promotion, Breakthrough Trophy, and recognition with family.

THE FINISH LINE

A child does not simply complete six classes. They break a board, earn a white belt, receive a trophy, and stand in front of their family with evidence: "I can prepare, act, and finish."

MEET THE INSTRUCTOR

Master Tracy Huff

U.S. ARMY VETERAN | FOURTH-DEGREE BLACK BELT

Master Tracy Huff is the founder of Family Martial Arts Academy, an author, leadership coach, and lifelong builder of confident leaders. Her work combines the standards and discipline of traditional martial arts with practical systems children and families can use beyond the mat.

THE BUILT TO LEAD STANDARD

Standards + practice + follow-through

Children are respected enough to be given clear lines. They are coached to take ownership. They are allowed to struggle, reset, and try again. The goal is not perfect behavior. The goal is a stronger leadership identity and a repeatable response when the fight shows up.

WHO MAKES A COHORT POSSIBLE
